

"LETTUCE PRAY..."

Vegetables, the first thing that leap to mind when you think of Christmas.

Okay, maybe not. More likely it's the Christ child, the smiles of children, and presents. For Liberian refugees in Ghana, though, fruits, vegetables and other foods would be presents.

Thousands of Liberian children were displaced by the civil war in their country. And though the war is over, for many Liberians there is no place to which to return. No family, no home, no work.

For years now, The Buduburam School has been a haven for hundreds of Liberian children, providing them with the education necessary to become productive adults. But it's hard to learn on an empty stomach. That's where you can help.

In honor of someone you care about, you can make a donation to supply and build a permaculture garden on the grounds of the Buduburam School. Excess donations will help purchase books and uniforms so that more children can attend the school.

Gift forms are available in the undercroft after the 10AM service, online at ccbny.org and at the Parish Office. For more information, contact Ken Richardson at krichardson@ccbny.org.

Vegetables. What Christmas is all about.
